

Acklyn Lynch

"Advances in Global Technology and the Seduced Consumer"

Thursday, November 5, 2009

6:30-8:00pm

SO 1019

Acklyn Lynch is a Philosopher and Political Economist, and a retired professor emeritus and chairperson of Africana Studies at University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

Publication: Nightmare Overhanging Darkly: Essays on Black Culture and Resistance

Lynch will discuss the advances of science and technology as it relates to global communication systems at political, corporate, and consumer levels. He will focus on the impact that these systems have on American society as it relates to education and consumption as well as the social-psychological impact of this technology on popular culture in the present day African Diaspora world.

Sponsors:

- The Shaw Industries Chair in History
- The College of Humanities and Social Science
- American Studies
- The Coles College
- The College of Science and Mathematics
- African & African Diaspora Studies
- The Department of English
- The Department of Communications